R. R. Brewster's fulsome praise of the administration in his speeches throughout the state are in striking contrast to what other party leaders are saying. Just to show what men whose names are familiar to all are saying about it, we quote below from the congressional record:

"Senator La Follette minced no word—he never does. He said:

"It would seem, sir, that the men responsible for this Republican administration, in the light of this history would, with the return of the Republican party to power, frame a tariff bill with at least some show of decent regard for meeting the undoubted will and desire of the vast majority of the people. But it seems that the same interests which foisted the Dingley tariff and even worse Payne-Aldrich tariff upon the long suffering public are strong enough to write into the statutes of this country the far worse tariff provisions contained in the pending bill. I don't understand sir, how men charged with the duty of upholding and preserving the principles of the Republican party, even if they felt no responsibility to the people who elected them, can deliberately force through legislation which they must know means the defeat, if not the utter ruin of the party. If the elections of 1910 and 1914 and 1916 mean nothing to them then let them look to the Republican primaries held in Indiana, North Dakota, Iowa and other states within the last few months. Powerful, indeed must be the influence which can bludgeon through this legislation when the political leaders responsible for it know that it means increased taxes and burdens, but the responsibility is fixed and inescapable, it is with the party to whom has been entrusted the reins of authority. For the sake of our common country, for the sake of peace and happiness among the millions who must bear the awful load, who can not pass it on, will not the old party of so many noble victories rise to meet the occasion and stop the orgy of extravagance, this saturnalia of expenditure, until the people can redeem our country from discontent and strife and bring it back to power and prosperity?—Piedmont Banner.

ATTACK POLITICAL JOBS

many citizens and citizenesses to thinking.

"Mr. Hewitt pays attention to the fact that although the budget estimates indicate there will there will be 20 per cent loss collected by the bureau of internal revenue, congress has granted authority to the bureau to spend 13 per cent more. In other words the cost of tax collection has risen 41 per cent.

"That's a phenomenon that does not exactly square with Mr. Harding's sincere and in many directions effectual effort to economize. Mr. Hewitt is not at a loss for the explanation. He will anyone else who understands our political machinery. 'What job,' says Mr. Hewitt 'are not exceedingly distasteful to the average congressman, because he swears hopes that he may yet some far his constituents. The observer of this is that as he averaged congressman has no cash home in the case of the army and navy personnel he is a stern economist there, slashing regardless of considered policies and judgment of those more fitted than he to judge.

"We have here one powerful influence always operative for the multiplication of civilian jobs in the interest of 'white sine'. There is another influence which is less known but very powerful. Mr. Hewitt says that the dominating force back of the increasing allowance of the bureau was probably that of the Lumber crats.

"The public knows too little of the pressure constantly brought upon congress in favor of increased public expenditures by those who will do the spending; that is, by the officials in charge of government activities. It is natural for men in charge of any work to find it easy to discover things which should be done, or done better or done on a larger scale. Each bureau is convinced of its own importance and obeys that law of growth which is part of life. No bureau is ready to restrict itself, but off the contrary is always pressing forward.

"This tendency to growth in bureaucracy requires constant resistance. Every nation which has permitted it to go on has suffered heavily from it. The French revolution came from the breakdown of a centralized bureaucratic system which brought France to the brink of ruin by paralyzing the functions of its economic life. It brought general stagnation, the crushing of private enterprise, and finally famine. In republican France today there is an enormous machinery of public officialdom which costs as a heavy weight on the French people, wasting the public taxes through red tape and inefficient service and demoralizing French politics through the influence of a great army of job holders. In every country where bureaucracy has grown up the results have been seriously injurious.

"In the concrete case before us, that of the revenue collection, there may be existed not only an unnecessary expenditure of public money, but an increased interference with private affairs, one of the curses of bureaucratic government. As Mr. Hewitt points out, there will be less money to collect, but there will be more collectors. There will be fewer accounts to audit, but there will be more auditors. There will be fewer schedules filed but there will be more clerks to handle them. In other words, not only must the taxpayer bear his burden of the tax, but he will be forced to submit to more questions, more audits, more investigations and more checking up than last year, if all the bureaucrats are to find employment.

"Here, in fact, is the worst evil of bureaucracy. It complicates machinery in order to keep itself employed. Study conditions in bureaucratic Europe and you will find red tape insisted upon so that there may be officeholders to unwind it. Absent, involved methods are stubbornly preserved in order to give clerks something to do, and, of course, this means an enormous waste of energy and loss of motion not only in government business but in everything unfortunate enough to be touched by government. It means not only mulcting the taxpayer of inordinate taxes in order to maintain a system of doing public business in the most cumbersome and expensive way conceivable but it means keeping thousands of men and women employed at doing unnecessary things when they should be working in private enterprise at some productive service; and finally, it means strangling private enterprise itself in a network of vexatious restrictions and regulations which lower its efficiency.

"America has prospered through freedom from slavery to officialdom and government interference. We began our national life with a wholesome distrust and dislike of them and for a long time resisted aggrandizement of the state and extensions of regulations in our private affairs. But this resistance has weakened. We have had a large influx of people who were not brought up in the tradition of individual responsibility and freedom who, though many of them had suffered the oppression of governments, were willing to turn to a government presumably more beneficent to assist them in our country. Furthermore, for more than half a century there has been a persistent propaganda on behalf of socialism, which is simply bureaucracy triumphant, and, unfortunately, there have been evils of predatory individualism and dubious combinations of private power to give this propaganda a superficial plausibility.

"But the American people, if they have any regard for their liberties and any appreciation of their good fortune in keeping free from the exhausting and burdensome imposition of government interference and control, or bureaucracy or organized officialdom, will wake up and check the

Deviled Spanish Green Olives

Here's a little horn d'oeuvre that may be prepared in a few minutes. It's novel and tasty. The family will enjoy it, and so will the guests. It's one of those "surprise" appetizers that laces your dinner unique and charming.

Pit large green olives and fill with the yolk of hard-boiled eggs mixed to a paste with a little butter. Lay an olive on a strip of bacon, sprinkle with paprika, and a tiny pinch of mustard, roll up, fasten with toothpick and broil just long enough to crisp the bacon. Serve on toast fingers.

HER NICE new husband.
STEPPED OUT of the house.
WHISTLING LIKE a bird.
WHICH ALARMED young wife.
ESPECIALLY WHEN.
SHE FOUND she'd picked
THE WRONG package.
AND INSTEAD of oatmeal.
HAD GIVEN him birdseed.
BUT DON'T think from this.
THAT EVERY guy.
YOU HEAR whistling.
HAS NECESSARILY.
BEEN ROBBING the canary.
OTHER THINGS inspire.
THE ALMOST human male.
TO BLOW through his lips.
AND MAKE shrill noises.
A RAISE, for example.
OR A day off when.
A DOUBLE header is on.

OR AN everyday thing.
LIKE A good drag.
ON ONE of those smokes.
THAT SATISFY.
WHICH CERTAINLY are.
THE REAL birdseed.
FOR MAKING men.
TRILL THEIR pipes for joy.
SO LADIES, if hubby.
GOES AWAY whistling.
YOU NEEDN'T worry.
ALL'S SWELL.

WHEN you say that Chesterfields "satisfy," you're whistling. You know—the instant you light one—that the tobacco in it are of prime selection, both Turkish and Domestic. And the blend—well, you never tasted such smoothness and full-flavored body! No wonder the "satisfy-blend" is kept secret. It can't be copied.

Did you know about the Chesterfield package of 10?
